

AN INTIMATE
DINING ROOM
IN A PACIFIC
HEIGHTS

small white space becomes elegant room for a client who enjoys traditional decor.

This Pacific Heights apartment was devoid of any color or personality when Beryn's client purchased it.

To make this new space feel like home for her client, Beryn addressed his preference for traditional elegance by adding color, ornate traditional style architectural details, lots of fabric, and custom made furniture.

To keep the feeling intimate, we used a soft "hand" with these strong colors.

Ornate, gold painted chair rail moulding above Lincrusta wallpaper created a wainscot effect on the walls. Then all the surfaces, including the ceiling, were faux painted.

Old-world style window treatments used layers of fabric and trim to give the room the feeling of intimacy it needed.

Complementary fabric was used on the chairs, and gleaming wax polish on the dining table added the finishing touch.

CLIENT ENDORSEMENT:

"Beryn listened carefully to what I wanted in my new home and got it exactly right. Her use of color and texture makes it feel like it's been here for years even though it's all new."
